LISTENING AUDIENCE

She will have your audience laughing and weeping in the same breath — and send them home lighter than they came in.

Kamille Lynn Bauer fought and laughed alongside her late husband — Clint the Cancer Warrior — through his illness, then raised their three children through the grief that followed. She has spent the years since doing the unglamorous work of building a life she never planned, and she talks about all of it out loud.

She coined the phrase “go through your trial with a smile” — not because the trial isn’t real, but because she refuses to let it have the last word. Across 110+ episodes of Put On Your Big Girl Pants and half a million views on YouTube, she has talked with a global audience about grief, loss, faith, and how people actually move forward: not in a straight line, and not on anyone else’s schedule.

For eleven years she ran two businesses at Gardner Village in West Jordan, Utah — a yarn store and a Halloween shop — and after Clint died there were no days off. A year and a half later she sold the yarn store to her own employee. When her youngest started junior high she went back to work, taking a job at a day spa in 2023 and buying it in July 2025. She serves on the South Valley Chamber’s Small Business Committee and co-hosts the Chamber’s Better Together podcast.

Kamille speaks with humor and startling honesty about the things most rooms are afraid to say out loud — and points her audiences toward hope, resilience, and faith in Jesus Christ.

SIGNATURE TALKS

How to Have Hope When Life Is Hard

The keynote. Kamille’s story as the spine — widowhood, raising three grieving children, rebuilding a life and a business she never planned on — and the habits that carried her, delivered with enough humor that the hard parts land without flattening the room.

Grief Doesn’t Clock Out

Three days of bereavement leave, and a life that takes three years. What a grieving employee actually needs, what managers consistently misread as underperformance, and how a team holds someone without walking on eggshells. Kamille got no days off at all — three kids and two businesses needed her the next morning — and she now leads a team of her own.

How to Be the Friend Who Shows Up

WHAT AUDIENCES SAY

Kamille spoke from the heart about both the difficult and unexpected gifts that can come from a cancer diagnosis — and the profound effect it has on the entire family. Her honesty, strength, and love touched everyone in the room. It was a privilege to hear her story, and one I know none of us will ever forget.

“Go through your trial with a smile.”

The phrase Kamille coined years ago, and the reason organizers book her twice. She never minimizes what a room is carrying — she has buried a husband, raised three grieving children, and rebuilt twice — but she refuses to let the hard thing have the last word.

Her podcast, Put On Your Big Girl Pants, has carried that message to listeners worldwide across 110+ episodes.

Let's talk about your event.
